ABOUT ME

I am a student of software engineering passionate for web development. During the years of my professional education, as well as self-learning, I have become familiar with numerous technologies from the areas of software development, data science, design and management.

With a foothold in software engineering and passion for arts and design, I am mostly focused on front-end development (currently working with React.js).

I am very devoted, hard-working and I have a substantial will to learn and work on challenging projects in new environments where I can grow and expand my knowledge.
